

The UK Market For Soft Floor Coverings

The soft floor coverings market has been declining for several years and reached 236m sq metres in 2003, compared to 253.1m sq metres in 2002. Estimates suggest a further decline to 230m sq metres in 2004. The UK manufacturing sector has been very badly affected and accounted for only 35% of the market in 2002/2003. In value terms the market reached UK1319m in 2003, compared to UK1337.1m in 2002. UK Manufacturers accounted for 54% of the market in value terms but 81% of the market in volume terms. The market value is forecast to reach UK1312m in 2004. Much of the decline in the UK has been caused by the switch to malimate flooring, particularly in the domestic sector. The major retailers have been able to take advantage of this trend have been successful in increasing sales, but UK carpet manufacturers have suffered badly.
