:: READ Absolutely FREE With KINDLE UNLIMITED BOOK #1 PREVIEW Frankie walked slowly down the hill, feeling as if nothing would ever go right for him. He didnt know what he had done in a past life that might cause him to go through so much crap in his life now, but he was pretty sure it mustve been horrible, because he was pretty miserable. Hed hated his job, and it was really difficult for him to find one that suited him. He wanted a career, but he didnt know what he was passionate about or what he was good at. He passed a shop window and glanced at himself in the reflection. BOOK #2 PREVIEW Helen looked over her shoulder as she walked through the trail in the woods. She had been hearing some pretty strange things about this area, but she had chosen to ignore it because it was her favorite place to do her running. Nothing had ever happened there before, and she thought that most of the people are saying had been made up for attention or out of boredom. She didnt know what else to think, because everything that people were saying was just too strange. BOOK #3 PREVIEW Hannah was the daughter of a wealthy family, and they were destined to have her get married to one of the ranchers in the area. Hannah was happy to see the various suitors, but most of them were just boring guys that couldnt handle a woman like her. Hannah wasnt necessarily high maintenance, but she was definitely a bit of trouble in many cases. She was different from the other girls her age. Most of them were trying to be dainty and get into proper high society, and she hated that she was considered one of the strange ones because she just wanted to work hard and have a decent life. She did like money, but it wasnt the one thing that revolved around her. BOOK #4 PREVIEW Rachel stood with her hands on her hips, looking out into the vast plains ahead. This journey was taking a lot longer than she had expected.

She had known the approximate time in days, but hadn't counted on the hours to feel so long. Pa was watering the horses, and Ma was in the back of the wagon, shuffling around to fix supper. They would be in their new home soon. In the meantime, this would be her life for the next who knew how long. BOOK #5 PREVIEW Clementine Lorrie watched the train go by. It was a hot summer day in Texas, and all she could think to do was hope that something would happen to take her mind off her boredom. The most exciting thing she could think of did not involve cows or the farm back at her father's house. No indeed. What she had in mind was the intriguing life of the boxcar jumpers and the people who were always running about scaring the bejeezus out of unassuming good Christian folk like her father. BOOK #6 PREVIEW Patricia walked along the side of the road slowly, thinking about her next mission. She would have to be stealthy if she wanted to bring back the book to her boss without being caught. But she was the best there was, so she didn't think she would have much to worry about. Unfortunately, that's usually when the most went wrong, in her experience, so she knew that she would be careful no matter how confident she felt that she would be able to pull it off.
