

She Built Her House

Nine single women of mature age - some of them grandmothers - found different ways to beat the mortgage game. Their solutions to achieving their own homes without a mortgage can inspire others, not only women, but also men and couples. Starting with fewer financial resources than many homeowners do, these women each tackled the question, How does a single woman without a lot of money achieve a dream home of her own, that nourishes her soul? None wanted, or could afford, a mortgage. Their solutions all required extra time, and extra work from themselves -- work which transformed into equity in their properties, and saved each of them thousands of dollars. They learned to part-build, or wholly build, or convert, or mastermind other people building, their own designs for their houses. Today their chosen homes are debt-free.
