

We Have Seen The Enemy and They Are Odd

Humor/Satire This 10,000 word novelette is approximately 40 pages. The Merlins Are Coming... Sergeant Thrasher Blake was commanding his M1A2 Abrams main battle tank on the Las Vegas strip. The crew was pursuing a Merlin spotted zigzagging in and out of the side streets along the strip. The tank was fast on pavement, capable of hitting speeds of up to 40 mph but the need to avoid abandoned vehicles on the road was drastically slowing them down. They saw smoke in the distance. Word was that a Merlin had taken out a car dealership. Thrasher wanted to be the first tank commander to bag a Merlin. Another tank crew had fired on a Merlin but missed. How do you miss such a big target, Thrasher thought. The M1s targeting system was state of the art, and when not falling out of the sky the ships looked like they were slow moving, even cumbersome when low to the ground. Maybe the other crew got nervous and fired on override. Thrashers crew wouldnt make that mistake. He was observing ahead through the viewfinder when he saw it, a slow-moving, steel-colored saucer, with twin menacing gun turrets. Contact! Three blocks ahead, Merlin closing. Prepare to fire M830. The Loader chose the round and loaded the main gun. Ready to fire, he said. The Merlin was flying slowly directly towards them, about 500 meters away, well within the effective range of the main gun. Fire when ready, Thrasher instructed the gunner. The tank rocked back slightly as the massive 120mm gun fired. Much of the noise was muffled by the communication headphones each crewmember wore, but they could feel the concussive force in their chests. Thrasher had been in the M1 for seven years and was still impressed by the guns power. Thrasher kept his eye on the Merlin as the gun fired. The expected explosion on the target did not come. Instead, a second later there was an explosion about a kilometer down the street in a hotel. Gunner, you missed! Reload! Again the tank thundered as the gun fired. Again the round was ineffective against the target, hitting the same hotel down the street. Gunner, what the hell happened? Is your targeting system malfunctioning? Negative Sarge, we were dead on! I cant explain it. Now the Merlin was bearing down on them. A booming voice could be heard over the intercom. You will suffer greatly for your attack. Prepare to be obliterated! Thrasher knew their first shells were ineffective. He needed to change strategy. Get us out of here. Take us east down the next side street. Reload with a 1028 and prepare to fire. The Merlin fired before the tank could start its turn down the street. There was a bright light through the tanks periscope and the crew could hear what sounded like hail hitting the armor plate. Were taking fire! said the driver.
