

What You See

What You See by Faith Ashlin What you see isn't always what you get. When ex-freedom fighter Richard buys a slave's freedom, he has a deal to offer. Being more inexperienced than he appears, he needs someone to teach him a few things. Sex for money and help is what he's proposing. Denny can always say no. Denny agrees, and as they settle into their new life, they learn things about themselves and each other, as well as the nature of freedom and love. But when are things ever that easy? Their world is suddenly shattered by a ghost from Richard's past. That's when Denny takes control, shows what he's made of and fulfills a need Richard didn't even know he had. It turns out neither are what they appear to be. Faith Ashlin About the Author: When Faith was clearing out her attic many years ago, she found a book she'd written as a ten-year-old. On rereading it she realized that it was the love story of two boys. Over the years her fascination with the image of beautiful young men, coiled together as they fell head over heels in love, became a passion for her. Since that first innocent book written in purple sparkly pen she has written many stories, set in varied worlds, but always with two men finding their way to happiness. Still nothing much has changed because now she can be found in a daydream, wandering around the supermarket, or sitting in a meeting at work still dreaming up stories.
